Quarterly Commentary

Market performance in 2023 marked a clear departure from 2022, with several asset classes performing both better than they did in 2022 and above consensus expectations. We head into 2024 more optimistic, as cooling inflation and the end of monetary tightening will return us to a normalized investing environment. Stock markets managed to advance on the back of a surprisingly resilient global economy, in the face of short- and long-term interest rates rising to multi-decade highs. The highest interest rates in 15 years continue to have huge lagged knock-on effects across the global economy – on real estate prices and on corporate investment. Key events in the last quarter of 2023 the markets were the Hamas attack on Israel triggering a devastating conflict, the rise of the 10 year US government yield above 5% after 16 years, the record high price of Gold and the oil price contraction despite the ongoing conflict in the Middle East, in part thanks to an increase in US supply and OPEC+ members' failure to adhere to production quotas. US Treasury yields fell at the end of 2023 following a continued decline in the year-over-year US core PCE print. The 2-Year and 10-Year US Treasury yields ultimately ended lower at 4.25% and 3.86%, respectively, experiencing their lowest close in over four months as many investors hope for an ease in inflation and monetary policy alike in 2024. Across the pond, the 10-Year German bund yield closed lower at 2.02%. Stock markets performed positively during the 4th quarter, with S&P500 up 11.69%, DAX up 8.87% and FTSE 100 up 2.31%. In fixed income markets the tightening of yields helped bond indices perform positively with Bloomberg Aggregate up 6.82%. The fund posted positive performance of +12.68% in 2023 mostly attributed to the positioning in equities that contributed positively by +8.7% approximately to the total performance and the positioning of the fixed income portfolio that contributed positively by 5% approximately to the total performance. Through the year the sub-fund used future contracts to mitigate foreign currency risk and specifically exposure to US Dollar. Also, future contracts of major stock indices were used to either reduce or increase equity and fixed income exposure according to the fast-changing market conditions. Derivative products contributed approximately -1% to the performance of fund.

Investment risks

Risks from the Sub-Fund's techniques and securities

Credit	Liquidity	Derivatives (Leverage)	Currency
The potential loss arising from the uncertainty on an issuer's ability or willingness to repay a loan or meet contractual obligations. This risk is heightened in a market environment, where interest rates are rising, as well as in connection with the Fund's investments in non-investment grade fixed income securities.	The fund operates in a market characterized by low trade volumes and securities that may become illiquid. This results in a higher risk of losses due to reduced trading speed/efficiency and sharper price fluctuations.	The derivatives market introduces significant levels of complexity, increasing the probability of adverse gains or losses to the fund that holds derivatives. The higher sensitivity to price movements of the underlying asset can asymmetrically affect the price of a derivative that is linked to it.	Exchange rate fluctuations may negatively impact the value of investments designated in another currency. Adverse movements in currency exchange rates could result in a decrease in return and a loss of capital. It may not be possible to successfully hedge against the currency risk exposure in all circumstances.
